Three entire countries want to 'move' to Australia ...
Population wild in Asia and the Pacific ...

Population pressures, security dangers, climate changes, natural disasters

Apocalypse Soon!

It isn't a wild tale. It is a fact. Three entire countries would like to up stakes and move to Australia. So far, the short list is Tuvalu, Kiribati and Maldives. The first two are small Pacific island nations, the latter an Indian Ocean Moslem state. The number of people involved : 425,000. These three countries are threatened by rising sea levels and other natural calamities.

It's not just the people who want to come. The sovereignties want to transfer too! This is doubly ominous. This means that they want to set up shop as sovereign entities on our soil - with their seats in the UN intact. If they 'buy' land and do that - they are independent states. It is then, not just a question of new immigrants, but the partition of our country.

But all this is just beginning. There are conflicts over population and resources and the documented potential for natural calamities in Asia sending waves of people in search of sustenance, things which overshadow the first threat of 'environmental refugees'. But these three issues, in this period of generalised crisis, can run together. It is a case of 'apocalypse soon'!

Australian Defence Agencies Recognise A Danger

It is not that Australian defence experts and politicians don't know all this - and more. They do.

One report, "Climate Change: The Environment Resources And Conflict" (2008), warned of conflict in the Asia-Pacific (and elsewhere) over resources in an era of population pressure and climate instabilities. Low lying areas could be flooded, precipitating refugees and other national tensions. Reasonably, these things impact upon the bastard called "the global economy" - and thus our economy - and may challenge Australian security.

Another report to Kevin Rudd by Geoscience Australia (2008), warned of natural disasters - earthquakes, tsunamis - in the Asia-Pacific region which had great capacities to kill millions. Such disasters may also have dire economic and security impacts. A system of "early warning" was to be built.

And then there is the state's resident guru, Professor Ross Garnaut, who also said that there is an "expectation" by the international community and Pacific countries that Australia and New Zealand should provide assistance with the displacement by sea levels of Pacific Island communities. "There needs to be substantial resources allocated to assist with resettlement within the Pacific, but central to any solution will also be increased migration to Australia and New Zealand.

Nice of him. And what if we suggested assistance to the Solomons, or New Guinea for Pacific migrants? Why Australia? It is because Australia's political elite can no longer say 'no', because it is neither in control of events or of our national sovereignty either.

It is the sheer scale of the general crisis unfolding which menaces the nation.

Environmental Or 'Climate' Refugees Are Massing: A Camp Of The Saints Scenario.

In 1972, Jean Raspail authored The Camp Of The Saints. This work predicted that the exploding populations of the Third World would produce millions of economic "refugees". They would simply move to rich ("white") nations by any means available. Raspail predicted armadas of ships. The process in miniature has operated against Australia for over thirty years. Now it may 'explode'! So-called refugees from South Asia and South-East Asia are regular arrivals. As populations continue to rise, we can expect it. And there are other more immediate pressures. Norman Myers of Oxford University has estimated climate change will increase the number of environmental refugees six-fold over the next fifty years - to 150 million. The UN University's Institute for Environment and Human Security predicts that by 2010, there will be 50 million "environmentally displaced people", most of whom will be women and children. Australian climate scientist Dr. Graeme Pearman, has predicted that a 2°C rise in temperature would place 100 million people "directly at risk from coastal flooding" by 2100. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC), has also suggested 150 million environmental refugees would exist by 2050. Because the actual phenomena of climate change affecting human movement has not yet been empirically, systematically addressed, the European Commission funded a research project "Environmental Change and Forced Migration Scenarios (EACH-FOR)" to investigate, measure, and create scenarios for future environmental change. The project undertook 24 case studies worldwide with menacing conclusions.

Population shift within the Third World threatens war, but to the 'First World' it implies our genocide!

The Demands Of The Three States Set The Precedent

Recently elected president of the Maldives, Mohamed Nasheed, made international headlines on November 10 2008 for his plan to invest revenue from tourism into a sover-eighty fund to buy a new home for the nation's 300,000 inhabitants. The Maldives is clearly at risk of being washed away by rising sea levels. Nasheed argued in the Guardian: "We do not want to leave the Maldives, but we also do not want to be climate refugees living in tents for decades." And it is true enough; the Indian Ocean nation, made up of 1200 islands, is the lowest country in the world. Its highest point reaches only 2.4 metres above sea level.

"We can do nothing to stop climate change on our own and so we have to buy land elsewhere," President Nasheed said. "It's an insurance policy for the worst possible outcome. After all, the Israelis [began by buying] land in Palestine."

He said Sri Lanka and India were targets because they had similar cultures, cuisines and climates. Australia was being considered because of the amount of unoccupied land available. How nice of him too.

Meantime, over 100 representatives of non-government organisations from across the Asia-Pacific - including the main Pacific peak bodies and NGOs - have made an urgent call for Australian PM Kevin Rudd and NZ PM Helen Clark to "do more" to help the Pacific with "climate change" issues, and in particular with increased immigration and large-scale resettlement.

The groups, including, church, environment, aid, union and community organisations, had released an Open Letter for the 2008 Pacific Islands Leadership Forum in Niue.

The letter sets out a six point action plan including assistance for resettlement within the Pacific and an increase in permanent migration from the Pacific region to Australia and New Zealand. Australia announced a guest worker program with the Pacific at the Forum. Thousands are already displacing Australian workers in agricultural towns and on building sites everywhere.

Brad Crouch reported on news.com.au on October 4, that the Tuvaluan prime minister, Apisai Ielemia, visited Canberra in August to "secretly" float a plan for the mass migration of the country's citizens.

Tuvalu is a micro state, made up of eight low-lying atolls and coral islands with an estimated population of just under 12,000. It is the second-lowest nation in the world after the Maldives.

Kiribati, an island nation of 33 atolls and 100,000 people, is also struggling to deal with the multifaceted effects of climate instability.

Villages have already had to relocate to higher ground, islands are shrinking, coconut palms are dying and saltbushes are taking over, replacing life-giving vegetation.

The culturally diverse 7 million Pacific Islanders live in 22 nations. Most of the nations are low-lying atolls, with limited land space, small populations and little financial resources. More than 50% of Pacific Islander people live within 1.5 kilometres of the shore. They are all under threat of natural disaster and rising sea levels.

If these three petty states get away with their demands, a precedent is set for the full invasion of Asia's masses.

The Phillip Baxter Prophecy

Sir Phillip Baxter, former Vice Chancellor of the University of New South Wales and the father of Australia's nuclear industry, understood by the late 1960's what was coming. Baxter's worries rested upon the pure rationale of overpopulation. He was worried too, by the inter-relationship of population pressures with nuclear war in the northern hemisphere, something now overwhelmed perhaps - by environmental matters, natural disaster and conventional conflict. Like Raspaill he saw cataclysm for Australia.

Baxter was spurned by his establishment peers. Baxter said that it was lands like Australia and New Zealand that would beckon to the masses of people needing safety and resources. Baxter saw it all as inevitable, because the population explosion could not be curbed in time. Australia was their Life Boat. That was the hard message Baxter told patriotic groups in the early 1970's and also in 1977 — to the founders of this paper!

The brutality of the idea of Life Boat Australia is clear enough. It won't matter their colour, or their needs. We have. They want. We die.

We do not intend to 'share'. We do not intend to die. Rather, we aim to

Interview With 'Bunny' Brown

We publish this interview with Mr. 'Bunny' Brown, president of the Australian Long Distance Owners and Drivers Association (ALDODA).

What crisis do you see in the current transport industry?

Irresponsible log book laws and the petty restrictions imposed on truck drivers!

These new laws are put there for revenue, not safety for truck drivers and other road users. I know from my own experience of 40 years in the industry. When you are pushed by revenue laws, and major freight forwarders, not excluding Coles and Woolworths either and ridiculous time slots, there will be more fatalities, not less.

Every one of us is different. We need to control our own fatigue, when we eat and when we sleep, and do other chores that we have to do. We are not robots, but then, I'm not saying we don't need some sort of control in the industry. We don't need any more than ourselves and good sensible rules behind the wheel. Right now, there are petty dictators controlling so many and that is the major problem.

The only way I can see to fix the industry is to withdraw our services one way or the other.

Believe me, I know how to do it if I had the backing. Many truckies know too. They need leadership.

We are asking for a sustainable base rates, the right pay for the drivers and the right pay for the owner-drivers.

You have been a long-standing activist for truckies rights and well-being. How do you see the progress of this movement?

Due to the usual arrogance and sabotage we are in the process of restructuring our committee and restoring our capacity to organise.

If ALDODA got support and no interference from the TWU and all the other associations too, we could move quicker.

There are the groups 'Nat Roads' and the 'ATA' who undermine us every time we have a stoppage or try to do anything for the industry. These associations are only there for the top end of town. We get no support from them, those who are supposed to be there for the good of the transport industry. When we do make any progress they jump in and take all the credit.

ALDODA: how did it come into being? What future do you see for it in the current climate?

We moved after the failure of our stoppage at Albury/Wodonga in 2000 caused by interference from the TWU—John Allen and his secretary. They were there on the scene most of the time, starving us out and undermining us all the way.

I, Peter and Christine Curruthers, Gerry Brown and a few others, arranged a meeting at Coolac on the Hume Highway. That meeting place was closed by the police. After a day or two, some cafe owners agreed to let us have our meeting there on the Saturday afternoon.

Only a dozen or so turned up, as most had been warned to stay away by the police.

The result of that meeting was to form an Association committee and call it The Australian Long Distance Owner and Drivers Association. The following night four of us blocked the Gundagai Bridge on the Hume Highway. The Police turned back and threatened any support we got. We were railroaded by the Police, the Multinationals and the TWU.

The problem now is to get more truckies organized into an association that won't sell them out.

What ways do you recommend to truckies to fight back?

Truckies should fight back by refusing to work for Multinationals and others who cut the rates. No matter which way you are carting North, South, East, or West, there should be unity. We need a sustainable base rate per km and drivers paid by the hour.

KRudd warns of the danger of the "nationalist Right": For The Globalising Australian State, The Hour Of Reckoning Has Struck!

Dr. Jim Saleam and Alec Saunders

From the time we entered nationalist politics – or what may have passed for that long ago – we were told by our learned elders that system change (ie. regime change!) would only ever occur in a time of universal economic breakdown.

This time has almost arrived. However, as we learned the ropes of nationalist politics, we became aware of two other things.

We realised that there was a planetary crisis factor, a matter of food, population and resources. This thesis told us that a critical point may be reached, where the world would generate millions upon millions of 'refugees' from the overcrowded Third World seeking relief from pure poverty and natural danger. As President Boumediene of Algeria warned forty years ago, no quantity of atomic bombs might suffice to stem the human tide seeking a better life. Exit Australia.

We then accepted the 'Lenin thesis', a borrowing from the Left. Lenin said that only when the upper classes can't govern and the lower classes get restive, is change possible—and this situation can be best produced primarily by war. The Westernised globalising world has so many war-crises in the fire that only one could trigger its demise.

Clearly, henceforward the globe-system has to be lucky all the time. We only have to be lucky – once!

A window of opportunity for regime change in Australia has opened.

KRudd gives a truthful warning about his system's survival.

The Prime Minister, Kevin Rudd, recently wrote a revealing article in the Monthly magazine. It was his manifesto for action and a warning about the consequences of social upheaval in recession Australia.

He wrote that social democratic governments had to rise to the challenge of building a "practical policy response" to the current crisis that included a new regulatory regime for financial markets, or they would risk the rise of "extremist philosophies" such as those that arose during the Depression. "If we fail, there is a grave danger that new political voices to the extreme left and the nationalist Right will begin to achieve a legitimacy hitherto denied them. History is replete with the most disturbing of precedents".

Oh yes, how true!

However, the Trotskyites are the Left these days. There will never be a radical protest from these moronic sheep in wolves' clothing. After all, they accept the fundamental liberal goals of economic globalisation, mass immigration and multiculturalism. They may huff and puff, but they won't blow this establishment down. As for the old Reds and the Stalinist geriatrics, they are dying off in droves, or are in nursing homes. Game over.

That just leaves "the nationalist Right" – to use KRudd's term for us. In fact, we are neither Left nor Right, but because we embrace the Australian nationalist labour tradition, we are little bit of both and can even accept its "socialism without doctrines".

Where the Trotskyite Left fails is that it has no regard for Australia. The immigration disaster shows it.

Under KRudd, immigration will continue – with Left support. Some 200,000 this year. And the cheap labour coolies too who will pick our fruit and work on our building sites. The immigration-driven plans unveiled in Sydney recently include vast apartment blocks built over new railway stations, part of the extra 2,000,000 inhabitants planned for the next 25 years.

But alas for this lunacy, immigration too will reach the point of no return, where social and cultural tensions just explode. Do we fear that? We welcome it! The competition for jobs, housing and resources will crystalize in every Australian metropolis along ethnic lines and the multiculturalists will crack like the nuts they are!

Is the Regime In Economic Trouble?

Oh, indeed. Paul Keating told us recently that 200 of the world's top financial institutions have lost three quarters of their assets. He should know: he deregulated Aussie banking!

China has bought up Rio Tinto and other assets will be fire-sold.

Australian shares have lost half their value. Property values have sunk revealing masses of debt. Pension applications have exploded as Aussies have lost their 'super'.

Unemployment will jump by 300,000 in 2009. Massive public deficit financing is now the order of government.

We are to be bought off with free gifts, while the system desperately tries to stay afloat. We smell the system's blood.

A Time For War.

The American empire is at war still in Iraq and escalating it in Afghanistan – so colonised Australia is also at war. Now America is in liberal mode under a Third World president.

A new liberal rainbow bloc of the gay lobby, racial minorities, and 1960's white liberals, has moved to centre stage -with the Zionists changing over from the Bush line of Christian Zionism to the new liberalism.

The New World Order policeman is seeking to impose liberalism everywhere and to defuse its challenges by building new dangerous alliances. They will fail – in blood. Like when they used Pol Pot against the USSR and Vietnam, the regime has conjured up creatures from hell and is desperate to use other creatures to overcome them.

Peter Beinart of the shadow government agency, the Council of Foreign Relations, wrote in Time magazine (2 Feb):

"This has been done before. America won World War Two and the Cold War not by taking on all the enemies of freedom at once but by shrewdly isolating its greatest enemies even though that meant cutting deals with some pretty nasty guys. The US beat Hitler by allying with Stalin, and it beat Moscow in part by allying with Beijing. Al Qaeda can be beaten with the help of Iran, elements of the Taliban, perhaps Syria and may be one day, Hezbollah and Hamas. The US must isolate violent jihadists who want to attack America rather than isolating itself by defining the war on terrorism as America against the field."

But world politics is more complex than US foreign policy. Some three hundred million people in Asia alone are so close to the poverty line that the economic downturn could push them back below it. Indeed, while India reduced its poverty rate during the recent boom years, the absolute number of desperately poor Indians increased from 436 million in 1990 to 456 million in 2008 or 42% of the population. China now has thirty million unemployed. Businesses are shutting all over Asia and the Asian Tigers – are really just paper tigers. We smell war and revolution.

So many flashpoints, so little time. North Korea has its opportunity to smash South Korea to bits – and crash a major economic player. Red China looks enviously at the 'other China' on Taiwan and may take its chance. The Evil Empire fights in Afghanistan to ensure, not the defeat of the nothing Al Qaeda of bin Ladin (and control of opium so the CIA can sell it), but to make sure Pakistan does not fall apart and in its unstable state fight a war with India. Such a war would make a Depression after a crash of the – world economy—and nuclear fallout. And don't forget the Middle East where Israeli imperialism still enjoys US support and militant Islam necessarily arises against it.

Yet, we should not forget the happy moments of internal revolutions. Those pesky Maoist communists are rising in India, Ceylon, Thailand, the Phillipines and Peru (oops and maybe again in China) those who seek violent revolution against the regimes of our trading partners. Do we wish them luck? Why not? They don't want to invade us, nor we them. In the case of the Indian Maoists, they might set adrift a refugee armada of millions of cockroach Indian yuppie parasites and cause the Australian people either to rise – or sink. We would return them back to labour camps in defiance of the UN – or maybe just sink them in mid ocean. Whatever happens, the recession would become Depression as India folds – and regime change in Australia may follow.

An Australian radicalism

Yes, we are radicals. Even more, we preach open sedition. Like Henry Lawson, we say that blood might stain the wattle and that freedom must be conquered here against the foreign minded who serve the foreign master. We intend to proclaim it loud and clear from suburb to suburb, from city to country.

Arthur Calwell told it straight. He said that we must think of an Australianist Revolution against those of wealth and power – against the anti Australians, the traitor class.

Frank Anstey would call a spade a spade and a parasite a parasite. We want our country back. We want all of it: we want our identity, our independence our freedom; we want power and wealth in the hands of the productive classes.

KRudd raised the spectre of fascism. No, it's Jack Lang's faith, not fascism for us. It's the Australian people's movement like in the 1930's against the banksters and the bludgers, a movement of national redemption – for regime change!

We are as a genie let out of its bottle. Our cause has waited a long time for an opportunity, to become a lot more than a mealy mouthed party of protest, or an isolated fraction.

As the writer Victor Hugo said: "Mightier than the tread of marching armies is the power of an idea whose time has come."

Australia First Calls National Conference To Oversee Its Growth In A Time Of Crisis!

CLASSIC AUSSIE TEXTS

AUSTRALIAN IDENTITY

"By the term Australian we mean not just those who were merely born in Australia. All white men who come to these shores with a clean record and who leave behind the memory of the class distinctions and religious differences of the Old World, all men who place the happiness of their adopted land before imperialism, are Australian."

BULLETIN magazine, July 2 1887.

The Australia First Party is interested, not so much in websites, but more in building sites. So it is in the new economic crisis period being presented to us. Why say that?

The party intends to campaign in the community, directly at universities, workplaces, dole lines and at truck stops. The party seeks to become a visible entity, a possession of the Australian People, as they re-assert their sovereignty in their own land.

Accordingly, as the party slides towards the numbers for its federal registration, the management committee has called a national conference for June 6-7 in Sydney.

The national conference will adopt a general line on the present economic and political crisis and then adopt a political resolution that will govern its conduct.

An expanded version of the article on the political-economic crisis on page three of this paper, appears at: <http://ausfirst.alphalink.com.au/crisis.html>

This item expresses the general sentiment of Australia First. We can see our opportunity to move forward.

The national conference will bring nationalists together from across the country for two days of speeches, debates and workshops.

The political resolution now being discussed inside the party, locates interest groups for the attention of Australia First policy development and activism.

These groups are: the tertiary students, the new unemployed and other unemployed, and truckies. While the party will recruit from wherever it can, it will focus resources accordingly to obtain the best result. Constructing a party is a rational process, even in the present fluid circumstances. It is time all rallied for action!

Bunny Brown Con'd from p. 2

Most of all right now we need to have our demands fought for by a fighting organization. I am absolutely dedicated to seeing ALDODA become that organization.

The Eight Core Policies Of Australia First A Programme And A Method

Whatever will benefit Australia, that we are for; whatever will harm Australia, that we are against. William Lane

The eight core policies of Australia First are the basis of association for the party. They are (with explanations and the implied ninth point) as follows:

1 Ensure Australia Retains Full Independence

Protect our sovereignty (national, constitutional and personal) and maintain an adequate defence, whilst being reasonable and fair in our nation's international dealings.

2 Rebuild Australian Manufacturing Industries

This is the only way we can be self sufficient. It will provide jobs for our children, and help buy back the farm and allow Australia to be free of foreign debts. Our infrastructure has been run down over many years - it must be rebuilt. We must improve the practicality and relevance of our educational systems, and target government support for industry to diversify, innovate, perform and expand. We recognise that small business is fundamental to this policy. A satisfactory financial environment is also urgent and essential.

3 Control Foreign Ownership

Bring foreign ownership and investment back under control.

4 Reduce and Limit Immigration

Immigration mistakes can be big long term mistakes. Immigration policy must take into account social cohesion, employment opportunities, urbanisation and environmental issues

5 Abolish Multiculturalism

End the divisive, government funded and institutionalised policy of multiculturalism.

6 Introduce Citizen's Initiated Referenda

Amend the Australian Constitution such that the people can initiate a constitutional referendum which, if approved by the Australian people, will amend the Australian Constitution. This simple step will confirm the political authority of voters and make legislators aware that they are the servants of the Australian People, not their masters. The people directly should also possess the sovereign right and the power to initiate other legislation

7. Strengthen the family

Promote policies that strengthen and protect the traditional family.

8 Strive to Rebuild A United Australia

Promote policies that recognise the interdependence of city and country.

9 Democratise Other Policy Issues

All other policies (non-core policies) are matters of free conscience and are not binding upon Australia First's future parliamentarians or councillors who are to represent their electorates.

Issues of public interest on which Australia First needs to formulate policy will be canvassed with the party membership and plebiscites conducted where deemed appropriate by the party's National Council. The party also permits branches to formulate specific electoral policies or community policies not inconsistent with the Eight Core Policies.

From time to time, the party will issue material that provides interpretation of the core policies. This interpretative material would reflect the spirit of the party.

The organizational purpose for this statement of policy and system for policy creation is simple: Australia First does not require weighty tomes, which change from month to month, as do the programmes of the Establishment parties and those who ape them. It requires a focus for action and for unity within the party.

Australia First is to build a new national movement. Practicality is method.
